ABSTRACT

Prepared for distribution at the 1975 Annual Convention of the Association for Educational Communications and Technology, this bibliography was assembled from the Current Index to Journals in Education (CIJE) and Resources in Education (RIE) computer files of the Educational Resources Information Center (ERIC). Annotated CIJE and RIE entries relating to library and media leadership are provided together with information on how to read the computer-generated citations. Procedures for ordering ERIC documents and a directory of ERIC microfiche collections are included. In addition, a listing of professional organizations in the field of libraries and media and a selective listing of their publications are provided. (DGC)

FOREWORD

This short, on-demand bibliography has been produced in microfiche for distribution at the 1975 Annual Convention of the Association for Educational Communications and Technology, April 13-17 in Dallas.

The ERIC Clearinghouse on Information Resources, located at the Stanford Center for Research and Development in Teaching, School of Education, Stanford University, has assembled this publication as a part of its User Service Program. The majority of this bibliography was computer-generated; entries were photographed directly from the computer format.

PLEASE NOTE:

1) Documents listed in this bibliography must be ordered according to the instructions on page 31. They CANNOT be ordered from the Clearinghouse itself.

2) All prices for microfiche and hardcopy are out-of-date up to the year 1974. It was not possible for the computer to update the prices, so they remain listed at incorrect, pre-inflation levels. However, the instructions on page 31 list new prices for microfiche and hardcopy, based on the number of pages in each document. Please adjust your payment accordingly.

3) Entries of CIJE and RIE citations are arranged alphabetically by authors' last names in this bibliography, or by title when an author is not listed.

INTRODUCTION

The subject of leadership is especially significant to members of the Association for Educational Communications and Technology. Without effective leadership, the field of educational communications and technology will simply plod along, getting nowhere fast.

Recent AECT efforts to stimulate improved leadership within its ranks are based on the non-elitist assumption that the potential for leadership exists everywhere---but it must be discovered and nurtured. AECT's Leadership Development Committee (Robert E. deKieffer, chairman) is working on this problem. It has involved a number of persons in the cooperative production of a leadership development handbook; it has expanded scholarship and internship opportunities for promising young persons interested in the field; and it is encouraging the offering of in-service workshops and programs on leadership topics among affiliate groups in all parts of of the country.

This bibliography of references about library/media-related leadership was prepared by the ERIC Clearinghouse on Information Resources at Stanford. We hope it will help you gain access to experiences and ideas of others whose work relates to the leadership goals we seek.

How To Read CIJE Entries and Annotations

CIJE, Current Index to Journals in Education, is one tool of the ERIC system--a monthly catalog which lists and briefly describes journal articles dealing with all phases of education. Over 700 journals dealing with education are covered by CIJE.

The computer readouts which follow are similar to this example of a CIJE citation:

How To Read RIE Entries and Annotations

RIE, Resources in Education, is the second main tool of the ERIC system--a monthly catalog which lists and abstracts a variety of unpublished materials dealing with all phases of education. Thousands of sources are contacted for input for RIE, and dozens of different types of printed materials are listed within its pages.

The computer readouts which follow are similar to this example of an RIE citation:

Women's opportunities for employment will be directly related to their level of skill and experience but also to the labor market demands through the remainder of the decade. The number of workers needed for all major occupational categories is expected to increase by about one-fifth between 1970 and 1980, but the growth rate will vary by occupational group. Professional and technical workers are expected to have the highest predicted rate (39 percent), followed by service workers (35 percent), clerical workers (26 percent), sales workers (24 percent), craftsmen and foremen (20 percent), managers and administrators (15 percent), and operatives (11 percent). This publication contains a brief discussion and employment information concerning occupations for professional and technical workers, managers and administrators, skilled trades, sales workers, clerical workers, and service workers. In order for women to take advantage of increased labor market demands, employer attitudes toward working women need to change and women must: (1) receive better career planning and counseling, (2) change their career aspirations, and (3) fully utilize the sources of legal protection and assistance which are available to them. A REPORT OF A CONFERENCE HELD TO ANALYZE LEARNING THEORY AS IT RELATES TO NEW MEDIA AND THE LEARNER IS PRESENTED. THE INVITATIONAL CONFERENCE WAS ATTENDED BY REPRESENTATIVES FROM PUBLIC SCHOOLS, UNIVERSITIES, STATE DEPARTMENTS OF EDUCATION, EDUCATIONAL AGENCIES, AND INDUSTRY. THE KNOWLEDGE EXPLOSION COUPLED WITH THE CURRENT REVOLUTION IN EDUCATIONAL TECHNOLOGY REQUIRED EDUCATORS TO REEXAMINE TODAY'S TEACHING PRACTICES. THE CONFERENCE DIRECTED ITS ATTENTION TO THESE PROBLEMS. THE OUTCOME OF THE CONFERENCE WAS FIVE COMMITTEE REPORTS. THE FIRST COMMITTEE DEALT WITH LEARNING OBJECTIVES. THIS COMMITTEE WAS PRIMARILY INTERESTED IN IDENTIFYING TASK OBJECTIVES BY APPLYING THE OPERATIONAL PRINCIPLES TO BEHAVIORAL GOALS. THE SECOND COMMITTEE DEALT WITH CONTENT CHARACTERISTICS AND LOOKED AT THE SELECTION AND ARRANGEMENT OF CONTENT. THE THIRD COMMITTEE DEALT WITH TEACHER-LEARNER CHARACTERISTICS. THE FOURTH COMMITTEE DEALT WITH MEDIA CHARACTERISTICS. THIS COMMITTEE REVIEWED SUCH MEDIA AS EDUCATIONAL TELEVISION (OPEN CIRCUIT), LANGUAGE LABORATORIES (WITH AUDIO-ACTIVE-RECORD FACILITIES), AND EDUCATIONAL CLASSROOM FILMS (COLOR/SOUND AND SPECIAL SUBJECT MATTER). THE FIFTH COMMITTEE DEALT WITH THE PHYSICAL ENVIRONMENT. IT FELT THAT THE FUNCTIONAL USE OF MEDIA IS FACILITATED BY PROVISION OF OPTIMUM ENVIRONMENTAL CONDITIONS, AND EDUCATIONAL SPACE SHOULD HAVE AN ATMOSPHERE CONDUCIVE TO THE TEACHING-LEARNING PROCESS.

A number of characteristics distinguish human relations or sensitivity training from other forms of experience-based education, including learning goals, desired outcomes, and assumptions about the learning process. Although research evidence on the effectiveness of human relations training is ambiguous, due to difficulties of research design and measurement, the following conclusions may be drawn: (1) Many individuals report significant behavioral changes following human relations training, (2) individuals who experience sensitivity training are more likely to improve their leadership skills than those who do not, and (3) the incidence of serious mental disturbance during training is estimated to be less than 1% of all participants. The new media consultant must be aware of the assumptions and applications of human relations training and other new areas of the applied behavioral sciences to achieve significant innovation in educational systems. A Delphi survey was conducted with the professional media staff in: (1) state educational agencies, (2) territories, (3) the District of Columbia, and (4) the U.S. Office of Education. Survey questions were designed to set organization goals, to plan program activities, and to organize the trends facing the supervisors. Only 19 questionnaires were returned. However, these forms listed over 150 possible items used in two subsequent mailings. The third round questionnaires identified five goal statements and five trends. The library/media goals involved evaluation, research and responsibility, resources, and strategies to help government officials understand the role of media. The trends involved staffing, preservice and inservice education, coordination, emphasis on library/media programs, and administrator apathy. (WCM)

Those involved in mass media and adult education in the Third World, including researchers in education, communication, and instructional technology, operators of mass media programs, and national policy makers, should regard themselves as change agents. In order to function effectively as such they must understand the methodological aspects of radio, film, and television at the levels of techniques, design, and policy. A system approach to the media which includes consideration of economic, ideological, socio-cultural, political, demographic and technological factors in conjunction with learner traits and objectives and instructional characteristics is the most useful organizing principle. In order to effect social change, media personnel must learn their tools, understand the media, focus on the message, produce their own programs, maintain pluralism, remain close to the culture, administer programs carefully, and follow up messages with social action. Researchers should concentrate upon reading available research, achieving efficient division of labor, and giving priority to research on the impact of media upon social behavior. Given all this, the mass media will be powerful tools for adult education. (PB)

An analysis of educational media training institutes was conducted to assess the residual effectiveness of those programs upon participants, the institutions involved, and the overall media field. Pertinent literature and existing institute documents were reviewed and questionnaires sent to institute participants and directors. Significant results included the findings that participants valued their experiences and reported an increase in their media-related skills. They found better jobs at higher salaries and tended to move into influential administrative positions at the individual school or, less often, at the county, district, or other broad organizational level. College media programs were also strengthened as a result of these institutes and a multiplier effect was achieved since graduates were significantly involved in training their colleagues in the field. The study did not substantiate that the original objective of producing a sufficient number of trained personnel had been fully achieved, but it did support the conclusion that the institutes were an effective means of developing trained manpower to meet the needs spawned by the unprecedented growth of educational media and technology. Therefore, it was concluded that as personnel needs continue to grow, the institutes should continue to play an important role. (JB)

Edited versions of the conference presentations are compiled. The purpose of the meeting was to bring together media specialists and other educators from throughout Pennsylvania to evaluate the basic assumptions underlying the educational use of cable television (CATV) and to share ideas about the ways in which cable could be used to change the educational system in response to current needs. The first four papers deal, respectively with analyses of the interface between CATV and education from the national, community, cable operator's and Federal Communications Commission points of view. Other presentations focus upon federal regulations and CATV, the role of the educator in working with cable operators and the franchise process, and school and community communications via cable. A description of an individual district's cable operation concludes the report. (LB)

The purpose of the evaluation is to inform the Leadership Training Institute (LTI) staff how well they performed their responsibilities during 1972-73. The procedures for gathering information on which the evaluation is based include: (1) a personal interview with each LTI staff member; (2) personal interview with appropriate Bureau of Libraries and Learning Resources, United States Office of Education (BLLR/USOE) staff; (3) telephone interviews with directors of 1972-73 institutes; and (4) a review of products produced. Because of the unavailability of participants' names and addresses, in addition to lack of time and money, only four members of the LTI staff, two representatives of the BLLR/USOE and 10 directors were interviewed during July, August, and September 1973. All available products were reviewed during August and September 1973. The conclusions and recommendations include: (1) most of the 1972-73 goals for LTI were achieved to a fairly high degree; and (2) the establishment of more realistic, less global goals is recommended. Detailed conclusions are listed, along with recommendations, in addition to appendixes. (WCM)

Keynote addresses, minutes of the meetings, committee reports, and a list of the 72 participants are given in this report of an annual meeting of educational media specialists at Lake Okoboji (Iowa). The keynote addresses were concerned with the application of educational technology and interdependence in the industrial-instructional revolution. The Conference Summary states the need to pioneer in ways to make the education-industry dialogue come alive. The committee reports were concerned with defining the roles for education and industry, providing options in education through media, technology and dehumanization, adaptation of instructional materials and equipment to an era of change; the need for criteria, and the recommendation that a national forum composed of leading educators and industrialists be convened in 1969 to devise a model for continuing dialogue. Appendices include an evaluation of the 1968 Okoboji conference and a compilation of the concerns of various delegates. (MF)

Community college libraries tend to be the pace setters for change in libraries. As the new media have been introduced into libraries, ways have been found to integrate them into the library to create multimedia resource collections. In addition to traditional library services, instructional design, materials production, computer operation, printing services, bookstores, learning labs, and information networks are possible future library responsibilities. New guidelines for library staff and facilities are emerging, in keeping with new trends of library service. Future trends may include: wider availability of computer output microfilm; wider community use through lifetime learning and college-without-walls programs; increased telecommunications and television use; more involvement in communication networks; and metamorphosis of the library into a campus-wide educational resources system. While libraries, as a species of complex organization, may not be facing immediate extinction, the available evidence suggests their long-term survival prospects are not particularly encouraging. Libraries, in general, have not responded adequately to rapidly changing social, economic and political factors. The locus for change lies in library education. Librarians, trained as information counselors, can make important contributions to the solution of some of this nation's major political, social and economic problems. However, before library schools can even begin to educate such specialists, faculty and administrators must recognize the need to make changes in almost every phase of their operations. They must establish new goals, assess their current status, and devise means by which to reach these new goals. Moreover, they must develop mechanisms with which to evaluate progress toward the attainment of these goals, as well as assessing the continued validity of their new objectives. Library educators must develop flexible organizational structures capable of adapting to new conditions, and they, themselves must be flexible and willing to modify their own behavior. (Author/SJ)

Part 1 of this two-part book examines "the subtle and ubiquitous nature of change." The purpose of the first group of readings is twofold. First, the works of Wasserman, Meadow, McAnally and Downs, Pettinger and Zapol, and Steere comment and report on needs, obstructions, and futures of many aspects of library-media-information programs and personnel. Second, the works of Evers, Victoria, Bailey, Tallmadge and Shearer, Gagne, Boulding, and Hug represent a limited sample of the diverse and sometimes difficult to interpret information that can help professionals better understand the forces that move forward library-media-information programs. Part 2 examines "alternative strategies or ways to aim at a moving target." The alternatives selected for this group of readings are samples of the general and specific problems created or aggravated by the speed of change. Articles by Atherton, Boilke, Louis and Metzger, Weaver, Hill, Homme, Shera, Kuehl, Wolek, Tosti and Ball, Weinthaler and Rotberg, and Hug are included. (WCM)

With the onset of the information explosion, the role of the special librarian began to change. While his service goals remained the same, new techniques had to be developed to cope with the flood of published literature. Both networking and information science represent predictable responses to this situation. Information science offers a new technique--the computer; a new method--management analysis; and a new approach to the problem of evaluation. Much research needs to be done on all aspects of the special librarian's role. In particular, the problem of evaluating information services on the user's terms needs to be thoroughly explored. The annual report of the Media Specialist Program briefly traces the history of the Leadership Training Institute (LTI) and its relationship to the Media Specialist Program. The main body of the report is devoted to the current activities of the Media Specialist Program. Fifteen projects funded during 1970-71 are reported. Seven of these projects were specifically designed to help the disadvantaged, eight employed a strong multiplier strategy, ten were structured around some sort of consortium plan which involved more than one institution, and five projects were oriented toward paraprofessional and technical areas. (Obviously, more than one priority emphasis was present in some projects.) Sample projects include: an interdisciplinary approach involving the areas of administration, teaching methodology, supervision, library science, curriculum, and educational technology; an interrelated program which combined formal coursework with field experiences in three selected urban school districts; a series of six three-week institutes to extend the acknowledged competencies in the organization of management of print materials of certificated librarians to include audiovisual materials. During the 1972-1973 year the Leadership Training Institute (LTI) implemented a variety of program activities to improve training skills, to assess needs, and to package certain products for dissemination to the profession in general. Specific activities included training sessions, on-site visits, development of instructional materials, and planning meetings with key professional groups. LTI has also edited reports from Title II-B institutes for inclusion in ERIC. All of these activities are described in detail, and there is a specific section on evaluation which includes an internal assessment and description of training activities. Appendices include: training sessions participants, formats, agendas, and evaluation forms; correspondence; site visit reports; and information on the Reforma Conference and other LTI activities. In its 1973-74 year the Leadership Training Institute (LTI) program focused on training needs in the areas of planning, evaluation, general management, and communications. The LTI team worked with directors and staffs of Title II-B institutions to increase librarians' skills in service to isolated communities, adults, and community colleges. Activities included: providing leadership training to institute directors and staffs and other key professional personnel; disseminating edited Title II-B institute reports through ERIC and in short topical papers, plus the development and distribution of package programs and instructional materials for use by trainers; providing technical assistance to Institute staffs through on-site visits, micro-workshops, dissemination of reports, newsletters, and other communications; and organizing, structuring, and evaluating meetings of key educators, representatives of national associations and other professionals to plan and coordinate strategies for change in library education. The bulk of the report consists of letters, institute and seminar agendas and proceedings, evaluations, evaluation questionnaires, site visit reports, workshop reports, and an example of the LTI newsletter "etcetera." The contents of this publication include the background papers used at the Institute on Discovery Management for Supervisors of Library Branches Serving the Underprivileged and Emerging Community held July 26-August 13, 1971 at the Graduate School of Library and Information Science, University of Pittsburgh. It is the purpose of this publication to assert that a "bold new approach" to the evaluation of library service is needed in order to exert leadership in the patterns of citizens involvement and local control. The core of the problem includes these imperatives: to integrate library service with the community; to focus attention upon the imperatives of a right to read and new careers; to make the full range of information and communicative help which the community has to offer readily available to persons in need; to increase the likelihood that concerns can be identified and help provided early enough to do some good; to strengthen the service program of the community library for the prevention of information dislocation. The citizens themselves should ultimately be involved in determining the kind of information programs they get. Without a situation-producing theory of communications, it is unlikely that librarians will ever produce the strategies for community leadership. (Author)

The purpose of this manual is to provide a guide to the inservice training of librarians for community liaison through the group work process. The manual was developed for the supervisor participants in the Institute on Discovery Management for Supervisors of Library Branches Serving the Underprivileged and Emerging Communities and is a companion volume to the institute papers, "Communications Management of Human Resources" (Bookstore, University of Pittsburgh, 1971). The aim is to provide a training manual which will lead to competence in group discussion methods and to an understanding of the major problems associated with group activity and community development work. The sessions have been designed to help a group acquire: increased sensitivity to the major factors involved in the discussion process; understand the importance and value of group discussion methods; develop skill in diagnosing the problems which a group leader may handle; acquire experience in leading discussion, in order to build leadership skills; and understand the role of skillful interpersonal relations as a technique for bridging the gap between the "passivity" of discussion and the activism of community involvement. This manual includes a number of separate topics which could be covered in a short training program. (Author)

Twenty experienced librarians and two alternates from school, college, and public libraries serving the inner city met twice weekly during fall 1971 in an institute concerned with library leadership development for services to the inner city. One day a week was devoted to field trips and another to speakers, discussion, and other activities at the School of Library Service, Columbia University. Forms to determine attitudes of participants were completed at the beginning of the institute and at the conclusion of the first six-week component devoted to the community. All field trips were evaluated by participants. Each participant was informally interviewed by the evaluator sometimes during the program. The institute was considered successful by the participants in that it provided new insights and new ideas. Attitudes of participants toward the inner city, its residents, and its organizations became more specific, and the view of community organizations became much more positive after the first component. Programs devised by participants were in large part well planned, and most included innovative elements in varying degress. (Author)

The objectives, program, participants, and evaluation of The Administration of Instructional Change (TAIC) Institute are described in this report. The training program was designed to help teams of local leadership personnel to design strategies using media to cope with problems that blocked change, as well as to facilitate change by integrating media more fully in the curriculum. The sections of the report include: 1) short- and long-range goals of the Institute program; 2) planning activities; 3) selection of participants; 4) day-to-day program activities; and 5) evaluation of district and participant attitudes. A synopsis of each TAIC team project is given. (CH)

PROFESSIONAL ORGANIZATIONS

In addition to the ERIC materials listed here, publications from the major professional organizations in the field of libraries and media are likely to be useful guides to leadership. Some of the most recent and important such publications are listed below.

The November 1974 issue of Audiovisual Instruction was devoted to the Association for Educational Communications and Technology's (AECT) new guidelines for the certification of both specialists and technicians in the areas of media management, media product development, and instructional program development. The issue is available for $2 from AECT, Dept. A25, 1201 16th St. N. W. Washington, D. C. 20036.

Curriculum Alternatives, Experiments in School Library Media Education. Robert N. Case and Anna Mary Lowrey, Eds. Chicago: American Library Association, 1974. ($15 Paper)

The final report of the five-year School Library Manpower Project is a comprehensive compilation of the project's activities which led to and include the two-year implementation of six experimental programs in school library media education.

Jobs in Instructional Media. James Wallington Washington, D. C.: Association for Educational Communications and Technology, 1970. ($6)

Reviews of jobs as they are performed in the instructional media field with particular emphasis on the paraprofessional; annotated list of 2-year colleges with programs for training media technicians.

Media Programs: District and School. Prepared jointly by the American Association of School Librarians, the American Library Association, and the Association for Educational Communications and Technology, 1975. ($2.95)

These new official standards provide guidelines to excellence for elementary and secondary school library programs that embrace all types of printed and audiovisual materials. (This work supersedes the 1969 Standards for School Media Programs.)

Nonprint Media in Academic Libraries. ACRL Publications in Librarianship No. 34. Pearce S. Grove, Ed. Chicago: American Library Association, 1975. ($10)

The administration and organization of nonprint materials require new policy decisions, knowledge of new sources of materials, and new ways of organizing them. In this work separate articles are devoted to recordings, slides, films, maps, and pictures. While making special reference to the academic library, each contributor, an expert in a specific format, isolates the issues and placed them in a context suitable for the decisions that must be made irrespective of the type of library. ACRL, the Association of College and Research Libraries, is a division of ALA.

Steps to Service. A Handbook of Procedures for the School Library Media Center. Mildred L. Nickel. Chicago: American Library Association, 1975. (price not yet available)

A manual of recommended procedures for the maintenance of a school library media center.

A System for Planning and Communicating School Media Programs. James W. Liesener. Chicago: American Library Association, 1975. (price not yet available)

This work takes the basic principles of PPBS (Planning, Programming and Budgeting System) and systems analysis and adapts them specifically to the problem of improving the effectiveness of planning, communicating, and justifying media programs.

In addition to the above publications, the Educational Media Yearbook, 1974. (James W. Brown, Ed. New York: R. R. Bowker Company, 1974. $19.95) is a source of articles concerning leadership.

INTRODUCTION

This Directory of ERIC Microfiche Collections is based primarily on the current "Standing Order" customer list of the ERIC Document Reproduction Service (EDRS). "Standing Order" customers are defined as those organizations which have placed orders/subscriptions with EDRS to receive, on a regular and continuous basis, the entire microfiche output (about 12,000 titles on 17,000 microfiche per year).

It must be understood, however, that the EDRS "Standing Order" list constantly fluctuates somewhat as new orders are placed, old orders are cancelled, or purchase orders run out (or are reactivated as a result of running out). In addition, there are a certain number of customers who, for internal accounting reasons, prefer to order on a month-by-month basis, rather than subscribe in advance for an entire year.

This Directory lists, therefore, a total of 572 organizations which are currently receiving regular monthly shipments of ERIC microfiche from EDRS or which are otherwise known to possess extensive ERIC microfiche collections. "Ship To" addresses for their organizations are listed in a basic arrangement by geographic location, e.g., states of the United States--Alabama to Wyoming--followed by foreign organizations. Organizations are listed by city within each state.

Not all organizations appearing on this list are open to the public; nor do they all necessarily include complete collections of the earlier documents. Where there is any doubt as to the accessibility or extent of a given microfiche collection, it is advisable to make inquiries in advance of a visit.

This Directory has been prepared for the National Institute of Education (sponsors of ERIC) by the ERIC Processing and Reference Facility, as a reference for the use of the ERIC network, associated organizations, and other interested parties. Inquiries concerning this list can be addressed to the Facility at the address shown on the cover. However, inquiries concerning the availability of ERIC microfiche, on either a standing order or on-demand basis, should be addressed directly to EDRS at the following address:
